Dear Peter

- Powerlink sub-contractors have repaired damage to the substation at Invicta Mill.
- They are currently completing testing on the power supply to the mill.
- Power is expected to be made available to the site early this evening.
- After supply is restored a number of tasks will need to be completed before we are able to restart the factory.
- We expect to commence lighting the boilers late tonight.
- The factory restart will be a slow process, as cold, solidified product will need to be cleared before the resumption of crushing can be considered.
- Crushing is currently expected to resume on Friday morning.
- Logistics officers are speaking to harvesting contractors regularly and will advise groups when they can recommence harvesting.
- We will continue to transfer cane already in bins to Kalamia Mill tomorrow for crushing.
- I will provide another update tomorrow.
- The grower tour of Invicta Mill scheduled for tonight has been cancelled. We will let you know when a new date has been confirmed.
