Milestone sugar shipment lands in the UK

Australia's first raw sugar shipment to the United Kingdom under the new Australia-United Kingdom Free Trade Agreement (A-UKFTA) docked in London this week, opening an important new market for the Queensland sugar industry.

The first Australian raw sugar sale under the new agreement was made by QSL, who sent the shipment of raw sugar produced in the Burdekin to Tate and Lyle Sugars' refinery in July.

Under the new agreement, which came into place on 31 May 2023, tariff-free raw sugar exports to the UK have resumed for the first time in 50 years, gradually increasing from an initial allocation of 80,000 tonnes this year (pro rata) until tariffs are completely eliminated on 1 January 2031.

Celebrating a century of service

Pictured: The Lucinda sugar terminal located approximately 100km north of Townsville. The jetty seen here was constructed in 1958 and runs to a length of 210 metres. However, to accommodate larger ships used in the bulk raw sugar trade, in 1979 a new jetty was built which stretches nearly 6km out into Halifax Bay and is the longest service jetty in the Southern Hemisphere.
